

BIZ LINES: Ag organizers receive grants

CONTINUED from G-1

Firm's new lawyers focus on estates and securities

By MICHAEL WINTERS
Bee staff writer

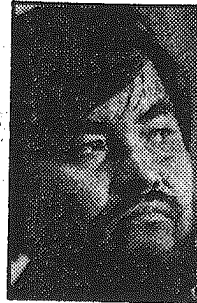

The Modesto law office of Damrell, Nelson, Schrimp, Pallos and Ladine recently added two attorneys to its staff. Debra L. Klevatt received her law degree from Loyola Law School in Los Angeles in May and was admitted to the State Bar this month. She practices estate planning and transactional law. The other addition is Lisa L. Gillispie, also admitted to the State Bar this month, who received her law degree from Boston University Law School in May. Her specialty areas are business and securities litigation.

Biz Lines

• • •

The Shalan Foundation has awarded $20,000 to two San Joaquin Valley farmworker organizers. Don Villarejo, director of the Davis-based California Institute for Rural Studies, and Luis Magana, director of the CIRS project Organizacion de Trabajadores Agricolas de California (Organization of Agricultural Workers of California), will

See Page G-3, BIZ LINES

Magana
justice.

share the money with their organizations. The Shalan Foundation of San Francisco has for 20 years made grants to organizations that identify with the struggle for economic and social justice.